ReadWorks Student Library

A place where students can choose from 1000s of nonfiction and fiction passages to read independently

The Research

Students need to read a wide variety of texts independently to build background knowledge and vocabulary.

Instead of replacing instructional time with independent reading, increase the amount of time students spend reading in the school day and encourage reading outside of school!

Students can read and comprehend higher-level texts when they are motivated by topic, interest, and choice.

To Get Started

1. When you create a new class, it will automatically be enabled! If you aren't sure, check in Class Admin, under the Student Library tab.
2. Students log in to their ReadWorks account and click on Library to access the full ReadWorks library of passages from kindergarten to two grades above their grade level.
   - Students can learn from all of our high-quality texts, including below-grade-level texts, and when they choose texts they are interested in reading, they can tackle higher-level texts!
   - No assessments - just reading for the joy of learning
   - Access the Student Library from any device
   - Daily recommendations based on expressed interests, what they have enjoyed reading, and what other students have enjoyed
3. Teachers can see what and how much students have read.

Using the Library

Build time into your school day for students to read independently in their libraries.

If students finish a project or task early, let them read independently in their library.

Encourage students to read independently at home or on the go. Students can access the passages on their devices, and read wherever they are!
